YMYL Y LEIN

Ym Medi 2009 dechreuais dynnu ffotograffau o'r cyrbyn sy'n rhedeg ar hyd ymyl y rheilffordd ar Y Cob ym Mhorthmadog.

Pam?

Yn syml, denwyd fy sylw gan y cyferbyniad rhwng ffurfioldeb geometri'r tyllau (crwn neu sgwâr) yn y conchrid a phatrymau anffurfiol, damweiniol y cerrigos oddi mewn iddynt. Bu'n symbyliad wedyn i edrych yn fanylach yn nhermau tôn, gwead a chyfansoddiad pob ffrâm.

Doedd dim bwriad gen i dynnu ffotograffau o bob cylch neu sgwâr yn eu trefn, dim ond y rhai oedd yn fy niddori ar y pryd. Cerddais Y Cob yn achlysurol gan gofnodi teithiau bach gweledol, mympwyol yn hytrach na rhyw deithiau lled-wyddonol fyddai'n cofnodi erydiad neu dreigl amser yn systematig. Bu'n fodd i gyflyru'r dychymyg gweledol.

Fel y nodais, dechreuais y teithiau ym Medi 2009. Tynnais ragor o ffotograffau ar adegau eraill ym Mawrth, Ebrill a Mai 2010. Erbyn hyn mae dros 700 o ddelweddau yn y gyfres.

Ym mis Ebrill derbyniais gais gan bwyllgor COB 200 yn gofyn am syniadau ar gyfer dathlu dauganlwyddiant Y Cob. Arddangoswyd y 200 ffoto cyntaf ynghyd â'r peintiadau yn 2011.

Wele ambell enghraifft o'r gyfres.

Rwy'n dal i ddarganfod delweddau sy'n ddifyr i mi, tra'n ceisio gofalu na fydd trê'n yn fy ngwastadu'n sydyn.

COBlyn o siwrnai i ddod?

Wn i ddim, ond diolch yn dalpie am y seiliau,

William Alexander Madocks.

THE EDGE OF THE LINE

In September 2009 I began taking photographs of the kerb running alongside the railtrack on The Cob, Porthmadog.

Why?

Simply because I was attracted to the contrast between the formal geometry of the holes (round or square) in the concrete and the aformal, accidental patterns of small stones that had accumulated inside them. This experience prompted me to look closer in terms of tone, texture and the composition of each frame.

I had no intention of photographing every circle or square in strict order, only the ones that I thought had further visual possibilities. I walked The Cob on subsequent occasions and recorded these little instinctual, visual journeys rather than embarking on some quasi-scientific documenting of erosion or the systematic recording of time passing. It's been a means of stimulating the visual imagination.

As I noted, I began the series in September 2009. I took more photographs at other times during March, April and May 2010. At present there are over 700 images in the series. In April I received a request from the COB 200 committee for ideas to celebrate The Cob's bicentenary. I exhibited the first 200 images alongside paintings inspired by them in 2011.

Examples from the series are shown.

I am still discovering images which interest me, while ensuring that a train doesn't suddenly flatten me.

Will my journeys continue?

I don't know, but thanks in spades for the foundations,

William Alexander Madocks.

DIWEDDARIAD

Dechreuais dynnu ffotograffau o'r cwrbyn ar ochr y rheilffordd ar Y Cob ar y degfed o Fedi 2009 ac yna tynnais fwy yn weddol gyson tan fis Rhagfyr 2011.

Mae gen i unarddeg albwm sy'n cynnwys 779 o ffotograffau a'r delweddau i gyd ar negyddion ac ar CD.

Er y gwaith cynllunio newydd yn yr orsaf, mae'r sgwariau a'r cylchoedd bychain a'u cynnwys byr hoedlog i'w gweld o hyd wrth gerdded ymlaen lawr Y Cob.

UPDATE

I began to take photographs of the kerb at the edge of the railway track on The Cob on the tenth of September 2009 and then fairly regularly until December 2011.

I have eleven albums which contain 779 photographs as well as their negatives and the images on CD.

In spite of the platform redesign, the small circles and squares and their ephemeral contents are still to be seen as one walks further along The Cob.
